The Vonguulian Organized Nation – Origin Story

We can't truly speak for anyone but ourselves. I was born in the USA but I am from Vonguul. The terms and conditions of my existence are not dictated by those that do not understand the weight of my purpose. I tried to be part of a whole, where I did not fit. I chose life when offered death. It is not my desire to impress upon anyone, anything other than what I stand for. I vow to create a man that is willing to live, than to suffer the slowest of deaths just because it is better than nothing. Nothing, another concept created to deceive you into thinking that is what you are. I vow to create a woman, that will create a child, that will know to be proud of the men we all support, because we support each other. Reciprocity isn't as difficult as some would have you believe.

Vonguul came from all of us. It is the feeling we all get when we know something is not right, because we inherently know what right is supposed to be. It the place we all desire to go when we're being wronged, because we know we won't be treated unfairly. When things don't make sense, no matter how we try to rationalize it. The safety in the trust we have for each other, because we know we choose our family. The bonds we built, with the people we trust, created the foundations we choose to stand on today.

I think it makes perfect sense for us to finally build a metaphorical house, for our collective household. All flowers aside, regardless of what others do, we have to be responsible for us no matter what, because maybe it isn't better to concede our lives for their opportunity to die slow. "Their" is anyone that wants you to do what they want you to do and don't care about what you want. There are many names for these kinds of people, e.g. users, abusers, sociopaths, etc.

The Vonguulian Organized Nation - Mission

💡 Our Mission

It truly isn't something complicated, we simply want to progress. Whether that is with, or without the rest of humanity.

Aren't you tired of politics treating your livelihood like it is a game or a disposable commodity that they have control of? Aren't you tired of religions lying to you about spirituality opting to instill fear in a mask of salvation? Aren't you tired of being sold a plate of poison at every store you're allowed to walk into? Aren't you tired of our children growing up confused and stressed out forced to rebel to feel normal? Aren't you tired of being tired of things that distract you from your purpose? I am.

The thing about this entire process, is that this is the easiest and simplest part for everyone to agree on. We are all tired of some obvious injustice, but we refuse to agree on what to do about it, or it looks too confusing to be implemented. Most people that are willing to discuss the topic are only willing to complain about the problems, like this is supposed to be some kind of therapeutic vent session topic. If you offer solutions, they offer excuses, and the problem never gets fixed.

I created a system where the only people that would complain about it would be the people that we are trying to avoid, the ones we always call "They" or "Them" no-trans. The people whose only desire is to use and abuse others for their own benefit or enjoyment.

And we have no place for them in Vonguul.

Introduction

This is a serious matter and should be treated as such, I am not here to flex on anyone about anything for any reason. It is my understanding that everyone has their role to play that was created specifically for them to do as they please. There should never be a time where we need to prove ourselves to anyone but us.

We have a structure designed to empower and encourage our members to excel at every chance that they get. Providing an outlet to grow beyond their potential, becoming exceptional by all standards. Most people that will do something with the information I am sharing with you won't do it right, and I will still have to continue the execution.

The plan only requires 1 sacrifice, most won't desire to be the first, but most also won't mind being second, because they will have had the opportunity to see the vision firsthand as a beneficiary.

The plan is simple. We own profitable businesses and split the proceeds amongst our organized nation. That is the core of the plan. The rest is for longevity and sustainability. That's literally all there is to it.

Let's talk about the details…

Education

Administration

Health

Technology

X-Factor

Education

While anyone can tell you that innovation and change are what's needed in the education system today, not many will tell you how that change should look. With the Vonguulian approach to education, it is understood that teaching someone the fundamentals of a subject before teaching them how the information can be applied, left little opportunity for an individual to be restricted by the knowledge they received. This is something that can be applied to existing subjects such as Math, Science, Language Arts, and even History, which are the 4 basic topics present in most publicly provided school systems. Though I don't think we are going to be able to compare to public schools in the targeted demographic, I also don't think that education should stop with the base topics. [See MATH Excerpt]

This begs the question of how would we implement these principles into our organized nation's community. There are levels to understanding how these principles will be implemented. First level, is where we are today, utilizing the knowledge we have as intellectual property to guide others to understanding the value in what we present as a solution. Second level, is where we would create a network and system for teaching anyone that would want to learn how to succeed in their endeavors and sets the groundwork for the third level. Third level, is where we start to give ourselves credibility. As Vonguul continues to expand, the businesses within our network will also grow and we can give credence to our own private schooling programs, accepting them as suitable facilitators for creating experts in their field, using methods that we approve. Fourth level, is where we can start establishing our own variant of a private school that receives not only our own credence but the credibility of what we would consider to be a foreign nation. Our private school would only be offered to our members and their offspring. Fifth level, is where we would start looking into creating a public university to spread our organized nations ideologies.

Education

What this looks like in practice…

First Level:
- Tutoring Classes for K-12 Subjects
- Specialized Guidance Services
- Webinars & Seminars
- Workshops & Online Video Courses

Second Level:
- Creating a targeted apprenticeship program
- Focus on creating success from within
- Providing resources to promising individuals
- With guidance from approved leaders

Third Level:
- Those that have gone through our courses receive recognition and certification
- Creating our own network of credibility
- Solving the issue of Entry Level Positions not being Entry Level by selecting from us first

Fourth Level:
- Create our own private education institute that is publicly accredited
- Admit the offspring of our members to ensure top quality education
- Make sure their education is validated by public communities we still engage with

Fifth Level:
- Create a University that allows our children to interact with other children in a safe and secure environment.
- Assured and enforced by us
- Allows our ideologies to be spread to those that are not part of our organized nation

Education

Every plan starts with the first step. With the plan for Vonguul, it is believed that education is the best starting point for us to progress to our desired destination. I do not wish for things, but I do acknowledge that it would be nice to already be at the Third level at least, where we could offer benefits that feel tangible.

We are where we are, and we will do what we can with what we have. If you think that our plan is worth supporting, the best way is to patronize our businesses and utilize our services to be ready for the day when Vonguul can be positioned to make reality what it should have been from the beginning.

One day, it truly will be someone's beginning, but for today we have the Vonguulian Design Counseling Service along with Human Design information cheat sheets. Tomorrow, figuratively, we will have cheat sheets for more education subjects, but we will be focusing on providing the best quality we can achieve, so it may take time to create something for every subject in a timely manner. However, the better our businesses (We call these "mines" in Vonguul, because they are mining the currency of a nation) perform, the faster our progress will be.

I think it was important to start with education and then give the details on the structure of Vonguul's Administration afterwards, because it should have set the precedence of creating a viable plan before creating an actionable plan. Where we currently are, we need a system that isn't designed to see us fail and give up, because we can't be mad at the person that does bad things for good reasons without being unfair.

Let's get into the details around the Vonguulian Administration

Vonguulian Administration

Organizational Structure

Leadership Council
Strategic decision-making body with representatives from all core divisions

Divisional Teams
Specialized groups focused on Administration, Education, Health, Technology, and X-factor initiatives

Member Communities
Regional and interest-based groups fostering collaboration and support

Checks & Balances

Governance Framework with clear accountability measures

Performance Metrics to track organizational and member growth

Feedback Systems for continuous improvement and member satisfaction

Member Protection protocols ensuring safety and well-being

Financial Transparency with regular reporting and audits

Vonguulian Administration

Before we go too deep into how Vonguul operates, it is imperative that it is expressed that Vonguul is NOT for everyone, and not everyone is qualified to be a part of what we are creating. We do not care about your demographics; we care about your mindset. Do your views and values align with the views and values of Vonguul?

To help you answer that question, we provide you with the core of the Vonguulian "Code of Conduct":

Code: LI 0 – In all things look for the Polarity
Code: LI 1 – Do not impose yourself onto others, without their Consent
Code: LI 2 – We do not Hope, We do not Pray, We Plan
Code: LI 3 – We do not Fear, what we do not Understand
Code: LI 4 – It is our Responsibility to Abstain from Ignorance
Code: LI 5 – Right and Wrong are Subjective terms that Require Definition to be Determined
Code: LI 6 – Plan to succeed in your endeavors, Always
Code: LI 7 – Don't Assume, Research
Code: LI 8 – Knowledge breeds Confidence and Confidence generates Power
Code: LI 9 – Know your own Strengths and Weaknesses

If you do not resonate with our Code, Vonguul probably isn't for you.

Vonguulian Administration

Let's assume you do resonate with our code of conduct, in order to be part of Vonguul, you would have to be invited by an existing member, and you would then have to pass 2 tests of character & mind. If you pass both tests, congratulations you become a Vonguulian with a Rank of 36.9 or Level 1 of 12. To increase your level, you would contribute to the organized nation in whatever way you deem compatible with your interests. The Rank tracks your progress to the next Level of Access which is why it is called Level 1. Each level unlocks 8% of access up to a max of 96% at Level 12.

All of this may sound confusing, but the idea is for it to make sense by the end of this section. If Vonguul were a business, what I would be explaining is the business model. It isn't complex but is instead layers of simplicity. The first layer involves the distribution of resources. Vonguul chooses to use a set split of 80/20, where 20 is dedicated to ourselves and 80 is dedicated to our community. In practice, this looks like a mine being created by an individual that contributed it to Vonguul, that individual would receive 20% of the net profits and 80% would be contributed to our community. The 20% is separate from your Level of Access and is yours in full no matter what, whereas the 80% requires Levels of access to be utilized. At Level 1 you have access to 8% of 100% of your share of the 80% shared among everyone.
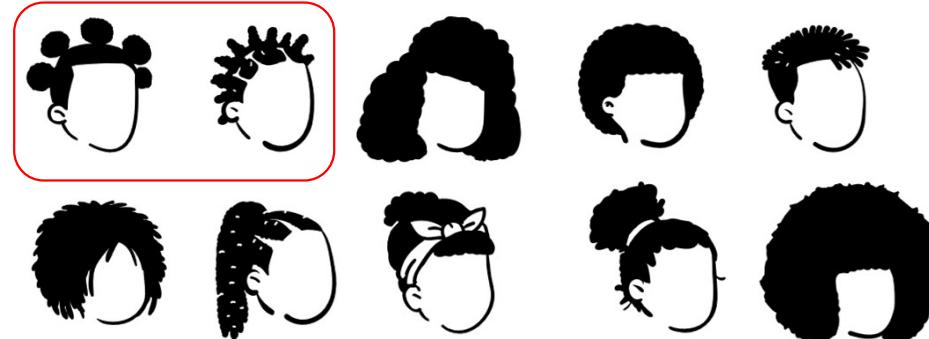

Let's visualize this for clarity.

Vonguulian Administration

Let's imagine Vonguul has 10 members
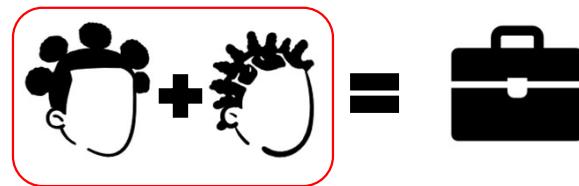

2 members decide to establish a mine
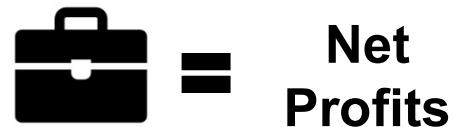

Vonguulian Administration

Those 2 members create a profitable business/mine, and contribute it to Vonguul

That business/mine then generates a net profit, that then follows the 80/20 split

$$\text{briefcase} = \text{Net Profits}$$
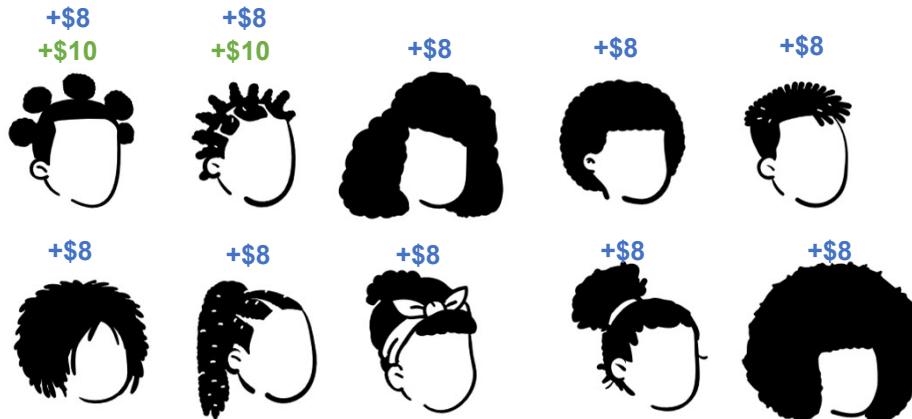

To keep things simple, let's say the net profit is $100

Vonguulian Administration

Of that $100, immediately $20 is split between the 2 members that created the business

+$10 +$10
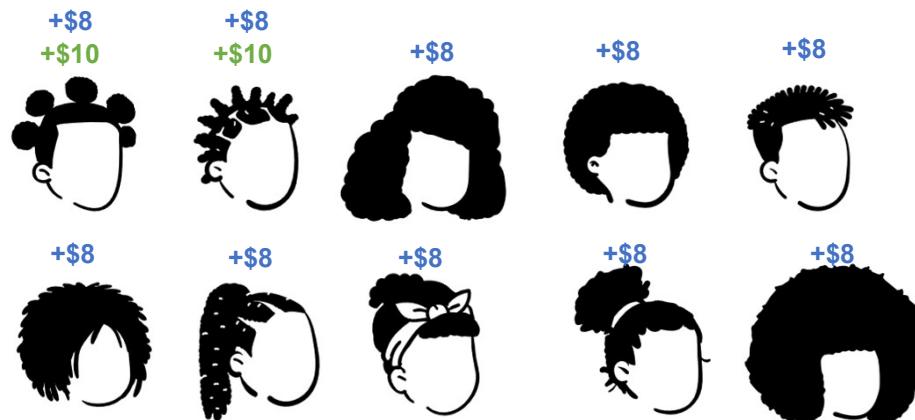

Of the remaining $80, it is split equally among all members

+$8   +$8
+$10 +$10   +$8   +$8   +$8

+$8   +$8   +$8   +$8   +$8

Vonguulian Administration

As you can see, the individuals that started the mine/business would profit considerably more than other members.

Also notice that the 80% split is a different color meaning it is subject to levels of access.

Many have asked why we have decided to use this distribution structure, and some have even asserted that no one would agree to this structure. I do understand why that is the question, and why some would think this way, but the answer is simple, and the assertion is short-sighted. The answer is for freedom, if we all chose to work together, we could create a communal freedom, the problem was always the getting everyone to work together part, with this method of distribution it allows us to work together seamlessly while simultaneously pursuing our personal goals. The assertion is short-sighted because the example given only looked at 1 business that generated a net profit of $100. What if it generated $100,000, and what if there were 1000 businesses doing the same thing? We would have a stable source of resources to grow together stronger.

Vonguulian Administration

Levels of Access

It might come at no surprise that some may choose to exploit systems created to help facilitate consistent improvement. Which is why Levels of Access were created in the first place. To prevent our members from being exploited in similar ways, Levels of Access ensure that our resources are being used to support the members that contribute to us as a whole. I say resources because even though initially this will primarily look like it is predominantly financial, but in the long-term vision this will encompass all resources we acquire.

From food, to raw materials, to alpha/beta products, Levels of Access is what communicates what each member has unlocked for their personal usage. It is designed to gradually unlock as the member experiences life. Earlier levels will be easier to achieve than later levels by design, we want to support our members as soon as possible so contribution is meant to be easy to obtain but exponentially decrease in efficacy towards levelling up.

This is meant to encourage our members to continue to strive beyond their limitations, but it is not unlikely that some of our members will become content with where they find themselves before reaching their peak. Though unfortunate, it may be a temporary development, and those members will still retain access to their previously unlocked levels. Sometimes we need a break, and we shouldn't be punished for taking one either.

Let's visualize the Levels of Access…

Vonguulian Administration

- Level 1
  - Rank 36
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 35
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 34
    - Degree 9 – 0

8% Level of Access

- Level 2
  - Rank 33
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 32
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 31
    - Degree 9 – 0

16% Level of Access

- Level 3
  - Rank 30
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 29
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 28
    - Degree 9 – 0

24% Level of Access

- Level 4
  - Rank 27
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 26
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 25
    - Degree 9 – 0

32% Level of Access

- Level 5
  - Rank 24
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 23
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 22
    - Degree 9 – 0

40% Level of Access

- Level 6
  - Rank 21
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 20
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 19
    - Degree 9 – 0

48% Level of Access

- Level 7
  - Rank 18
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 17
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 16
    - Degree 9 – 0

56% Level of Access

- Level 8
  - Rank 15
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 14
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 13
    - Degree 9 – 0

64% Level of Access

Vonguulian Administration

- Level 9
  - Rank 12
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 11
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 10
    - Degree 9 – 0

- Level 10
  - Rank 9
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 8
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 7
    - Degree 9 – 0

- Level 11
  - Rank 6
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 5
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 4
    - Degree 9 – 0

- Level 12
  - Rank 3
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 2
    - Degree 9 – 0
  - Rank 1
    - Degree 9 – 0

72% Level of Access   80% Level of Access   88% Level of Access   96% Level of Access

No one ever makes it to 100% Level of Access, as 4% is automatically reinvested into Vonguul as a whole. I have had many people ask me why, and the answer is simple, symbolic correspondence. At the point where these guidelines are implemented, it would have been made possible due to someone's "sacrifice", we are recreating that action symbolically, and we wouldn't be able to add another 8% evenly and stay within the confines of 100%.
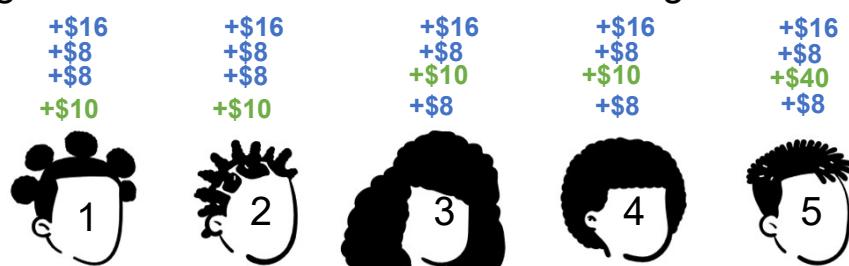

Typically, members will be identified by their Rank and/or Degree internally amongst other Vonguulians. Their level of access will be something only used when their account is being accessed. I am just explaining how things will look after full implementation. You might also be confused about how the 80/20 split interacts with the Levels of Access. Let's explain another layer of simplicity that will expose more people with bad intentions.

Vonguulian Administration

Based on the information we already have, we can understand that each member of Vonguul will have an account. Within that account there will be at least 2 sections, 1 for our 20 portions, and 1 for our 80 portions. Our 20 portion will be unlimited access, whereas our 80 portion will be subject to our Level of Access. Let's visualize this. Remember our 10 Vonguulians from the previous example, let's take half of them to demonstrate the Levels of Access.

Let's also say that 3 & 4 replicated what 1 & 2 did and 5 doubled their amount alone, and there are still a total of 10 Vonguulians. It would look like the following:

Accounts	20	80	Total
1	10	32	42
2	10	32	42
3	10	32	42
4	10	32	42
5	40	32	72

Vonguulian Administration

Let's take a look at our hypothetical 10 Vonguulians. We can see that 1 – 5 have amounts in their 20 column and 6 – 10 don't. We can also observe that everyone has 32 in their 80 column. To keep things simple, whatever is in the 20 column is full access. Whatever is in the 80 column is subject to Levels of Access.

Accounts	20	80	Total
1	10	32	42
2	10	32	42
3	10	32	42
4	10	32	42
5	40	32	72

Accounts	20	80	Total
6	0	32	32
7	0	32	32
8	0	32	32
9	0	32	32
10	0	32	32

Let's imagine that each Account has a Level of Access and visualize the effects.

Vonguulian Administration

Access Lv	Accounts	20	80	Total
2	1	10	32	42
3	2	10	32	42
5	3	10	32	42
1	4	10	32	42
6	5	40	32	72

Now we just utilize our diagram from slides 16 & 17 and put the amount each member has access to based on their access level in parenthesis.

Access Lv	Accounts	20	80	Total
2(16%)	1	10	32(5.12)	42(15.12)
3(24%)	2	10	32(7.68)	42(17.68)
5(40%)	3	10	32(12.80)	42(22.80)
1(8%)	4	10	32(2.56)	42(12.56)
6(48%)	5	40	32(15.36)	72(55.36)

The idea is that once we have enough resources, the 80 column of every member will look substantial enough to inspire them to do what it takes to acquire access to more of what is rightfully theirs.

We keep saying we're Kings/Queens or royalty in general, well royalty gets an inheritance. So many our us are begging for some form of monetary reparations but fail to realize that even if it were given it wouldn't make a large enough difference if we don't have a system in place to make sure it is secured and efficiently managed.

Though I don't agree with reparations, this is close enough to providing it for ourselves and can have an effect.

Vonguulian Administration

The next question to ask is how do members increase their level of access? We can infer that it has something to do with contributions to Vonguul, but how do we know that we aren't being manipulated into working for a cult or being scammed? The answers to these questions are also simple. We will cooperate with each other to compile a contribution list that will award merits. With enough merits, a member will automatically increase to the next level of access. It isn't a scam because you don't have to do anything however encouraged, and it is our full desire to make it possible for our members to have a fully sustainable life with the access that level 1 provides as this can only motivate a truly ambitious/passionate person to contribute more.

We must remember that what we are attempting to do, is harness the full focused capability of a united community. This is how we can encourage others to have another peaceful million-man march to express solidarity and initiate change. This is how we keep funds circulating in the melanated community for longer than 6 hours. This is how we can take care of each other ourselves. We should realize that we have talked about the problem long enough to create a viable plan, now it is time for execution.

Before we wrap up the Administration section, let's look at how the contribution list would playout in effect.

Vonguulian Administration

Scenario
Imagine Vonguul has 1000 members with 82 mines operating at full capacity. Everything looks well on the surface but internally those in charge of monitoring progress, identified a potential crisis that needs to be averted if possible. The tasks needed to be completed will be curated into a detailed contribution list item. This crisis that needs to be averted can be anything but let's say it's a manpower shortage. We will add to our main platform contribution list the line item requesting more manpower. It might resemble the following:

Cline Item 287 – XYZ Business Need Manpower
Description Type: Employment
Description: Lorem Ipsum…
Org Compensation: X Merits/Interval (25/day, 2/hr, 300/project)
Monetary Type: USD $23/hr

Just because you find opportunities within Vonguul, does not mean you are expected to perform for less compensation, in fact we are attempting to supplement your compensation just for being a part of Vonguul, thus the merits are used to increase your Level of Access which in turn increases how much resources you have on average. It is an endless cycle of helping each other progress their goals while increasing our own progression towards our own goals. It gives people a reason to do the right thing other than, it being the right thing to do, now you get rewarded too.

Vonguulian Administration

Vonguul has continued to formulate as more than just an ideology, with the aim to become something that could represent more than anything we have ever known possible. History being an inspiration for crafting a future we would want to come back to. The current wave of Vonguulians have strong interests in the metaphysical aspect of creation. From a higher realm we manifest into the physical, a level of wisdom others dare not to entertain. From this we have our own script, our own perspectives, and our own unique plan to influence a new domain under our own dominion.

This is bound to look like the slang version of a modern civilization, but with time, self-proclaimed scholars will echo interpretations of its profundities. With time I desire for our findings to find us positioned in a place fit for the facilitation of peace and progress. Until then, we may have to humble our expectations and prepare for what happens when those who do the stepping lose their ground to step on. I can imagine it being very difficult to manage perceived absolute power without understanding what it is like to have none.

I don't like the need that we have to speak in riddles, but we have to be versed in red herrings. Our history tells us the truth no matter how others seek to change it. We remember where we came from, so we know how to get where we're going. Sometimes the past can guide us into the future.

No matter what, no matter when, we need our own.

Health

🪷 Holistic Direction

🧘 Mind-Body Connection

Integrating mental wellness with physical health for complete wellbeing

⚖️ Life Balance

Harmonizing work, rest, and personal development activities

🍃 Environmental Alignment

Creating living and working spaces that support natural health rhythms

⚙️ Consumption & Behavior Habits

🍴 Nutritional Intelligence - Making informed food choices based on individual needs

💧 Hydration Optimization - Strategic water intake throughout the day

🌙 Sleep Quality - Creating routines for restorative rest cycles

🏃 Movement Integration - Incorporating physical activity into daily life

🌬️ Breathing Practices - Conscious breathing techniques for stress management

Insert specific behavioral frameworks or consumption guidelines your organization follows

Health

There is not a section in this presentation that I do not think is important, however I will admit that I may not be the most knowledgeable when it comes to health and wellness. This means I am hesitant to speak too much on how Vonguul will manage this sector in detail, but I will explain the approach Vonguul has decided to take from the onset. We can all hail holistic approaches to medicine as some sort of Holy Grail, but we also cannot deny the effectiveness of invasive procedures in modern medical practices.

Currently, Vonguul is not against invasive procedures, however we are also not avid supporters of those procedures either. If we can resolve the issue without those procedures and the efficacy is on par with modern medical approaches, I would think the non-invasive method is more suitable. To attempt to prove these kinds of claims would acquiesce to human testing with the potential to end countless lives, and that is something we shouldn't be willing to do. So instead, we focus on what we know to be accurate, but we don't ignore things that show promise.

What this means for the Health Sector of Vonguul is that we first focus on consumption and behaviors associated with a healthy lifestyle. By healthy, we mean a mind and body in alignment with the concept of health. This looks like unmodified raw food being produced for our members to consume, and exercise initiatives designed to promote healthy physical forms. This can formulate into large agricultural farms, which requires land, knowledge, and creativity to meet our needs. An exercise initiative can look be outlets for dancing, obstacle courses, athletic competitions, or outdoor events. Exercise doesn't have to be boring, but it does need to cater to as many individuals as possible.

Health

Let's surmise it to say we keep our options open if the result is thriving life. There were a few points that were mentioned so let's discuss what we do know.

Food
- Vegetation Realm
  - Vegetables
  - Fruits
  - Nuts
  - Roots
  - Herbs
- Animal Realm
  - Meat
  - Fish
  - Byproduct (Honey, Milk, Eggs, etc)
- Mineral & Metal Realms
  - Some Spices (e.g. salt)
  - Iron
  - Copper

Problems
- Vegetation Realm
  - Genetically Modified to Poison
  - Controlled group of availability
- Animal Realm
  - Genetically Modified to Poison
- Mineral & Metal Realms
  - Mostly derived from other realms

Notes
There is an abundance of edible vegetation that humanity does not consume due to consumerism. It wouldn't be economically sound to provide a large variety of Vegetation options to the masses. The animal realm is also a controlled group of availability but many would disagree with increasing the pool of consumption of flesh. Some argue that we are being fed human meat as an option without our knowledge.

Health

Potential Solutions
- Terrarium Grocery Store
  - This would be a facility that is designed to operate as a terrarium simulating natural environments safely, while also acting as a grocery store to be harvested by patrons.
  - Main problem with this idea would be the scale
  - Current options are in-home smart gardens
- Outdoor Hub
  - This is an optional idea, like the terrarium but with animals
  - Scale is a problem, but also humanitarian efforts would frown on this idea
  - I think it is a good idea because it is important to know how our bellies are filled
  - Alternatively, this could be a natural breeding facility to encourage natural pasture raising
- Holistic Biology
  - I know many would frown upon this idea, but science has shown support for certain holistic approaches, not to say we use only science to make decisions, it is just a place things are tested a lot for an answer
  - The Tantric Chakra System has been given enough recognition to be included in an approach to health
  - The Human Design System though it derives from Tantric Chakra System ideology, it also adds its own twist to original concepts

This is also only accounts for physical consumption; a complete health approach should factor in mental consumption habits as well.

Health

For some, visualizing consumption from a mental perspective can be simple. You could be familiar with the phrase "consuming media". What you watch, what you listen to, what you read, what you believe, what you doubt, how you view your experience are all related to your mental health. This is the psychology behind our physical actions, the reason why we end up doing the things we do.

I have come across a mindset referred to as the hermetic principles, and one of those principles is the principle of cause and effect. This is nearly synonymous with the scientific concept of causality, the relationship between cause and effect, the assertion that every effect has a cause. This is important to understand because when we take a step back from the moment, we can infer an array of possibilities, if we have enough data. Understandings beyond what we currently understand, can look like magic to those who can't fathom what we're capable of.

I could have decided to discuss psychology on this slide, but psychology alone isn't going to be enough to fully express what needs to be said. We're all, natural scientist trying to make sense of the world around us. We have all done our fair share of experiments, attempting to uncover some elusive secret. In my experience, we're never too far off from the truth, we just don't have that little bit of confirmation needed to fully indulge that truth, but if we do get that little bit of confirmation, we become unstoppable. What's even more fascinating is that sometimes we're right even when we're wrong. Take a placebo for example, it's just a water pill, but you believe it is the cure and somehow it becomes the cure. Belief is a hell of a drug.

Health

I've said all of this to say. We are clearly more than what we were taught we were. Maybe those who taught us, didn't know themselves, but either way, it is worth finding out. So yes, we may indulge in scientifically accepted practices for many things, but we may also entertain ideas that many would argue are works of fiction.

How would you argue the efficacy of a placebo pill when it works? I think it is more important for us to figure out why it works, and if it is possible to harness whatever it was that healed the ailments of the body. Some may argue that the methods we promote are like the concept of "God of the gaps" in the sense that there isn't a scientific way to explain or dissect what is happening.
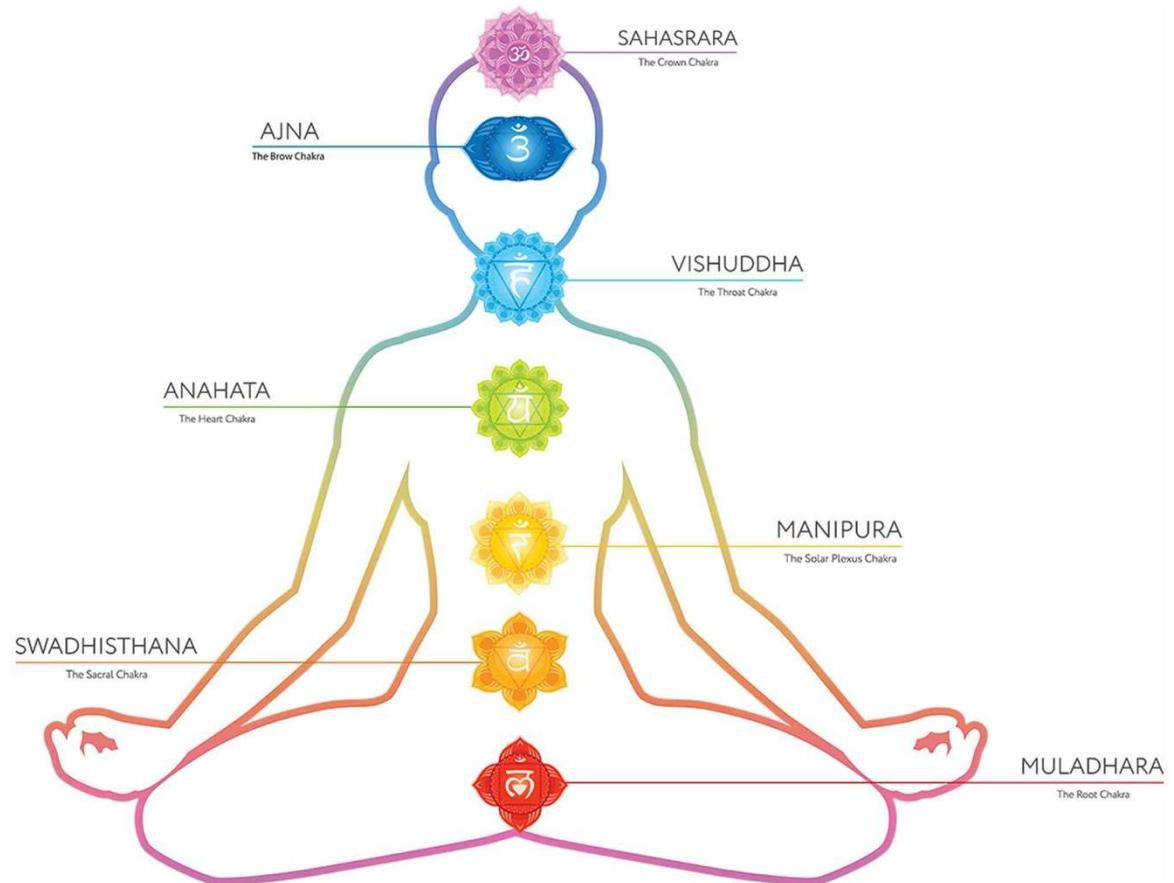

To use an example that is present today, we can look at the Tantric Chakra System. The Tantric Chakra System isn't completely supported or disproven by science. It is understood that we won't be able to open a human and find a physical chakra center, but what we will find is that wherever it is believed a chakra center is located there is an equally important Endocrine Gland that can be found in the same location. Ailments have been found to have correlations to the imbalances in these centers, and the methods promoted via the Tantric System are also known to resolve the related issues. Whether that is a placebo or not, it is working and once again, that is worth investigating.

To build a medical foundation from scratch is definitely a challenging goal to achieve, but we have clear hints to the directions we are likely to find success in if tested. Astrology, another pseudo-science that is hard to outright disprove, has traces of uniformity and science helps us to know what we are looking for to serve as proof of concept.

Health

Let's visualize some examples:

Chakra Center	Related Gland
Crown	Pineal Gland
Brow	Pituitary Gland
Throat	Thyroid
Heart	Thymus
Solar Plexus	Pancreas
Sacral	Ovaries/Testes
Root	Adrenal Glands

SAHASRARA
The Crown Chakra

AJNA
The Brow Chakra

VISHUDDHA
The Throat Chakra

ANAHATA
The Heart Chakra

MANIPURA
The Solar Plexus Chakra

SWADHISTHANA
The Sacral Chakra

MULADHARA
The Root Chakra

Function Chart

Chakra Center	Location	Endocrine Gland	Function
Crown	Top of Head	Pineal Gland	Melatonin production, hormone production
Brow	Between Eyebrows	Pituitary Gland	Regulates other glands, Master gland
Throat	Throat	Thyroid Gland	Hormone production, metabolism regulation
Heart	Center of Chest	Thymus	T-Cell maturation, hormone production
Solar Plexus	Upper Abdomen	Pancreas	Digestive functions, blood sugar regulation
Sacral	Lower Abdomen	Ovaries/Testes	Reproductive functions, hormone production
Root	Base of Spine	Adrenal Glands	Stress related responses, metabolism

Health

We can infer based on the function chart that these centers are typically manipulated via the regulation of hormone production, but we should also remember to ask for specifics. What exactly is going on and why? That is the main question we are attempting to answer, and I think it would be beneficial to know of the origin of this information.

The Tantric Chakra System was developed over approximately 1000 years and started from the Vedas. Without going too deep into another philosophy, it started with 1 chakra center, and it was considered the first breath. From that initial concept, several reputable minds influenced the understanding that is widely accepted today with the tantric system. 7 centers connected by channels that correlate to the physical body and is believed to be susceptible to manipulation via food, exercise, thoughts and breathing.

Personally, I don't have a 1000 years to research something from scratch. Logically, I would have to choose my next move carefully, prioritizing what has the highest probability of success. I could try to start over, or I can choose to expound upon what has been researched before me. I can attempt to verify the validity of the claims of my predecessors. I might fail, I might also succeed, but if I fail, I can just try again, if I succeed, we all win. I don't gamble but the odds are in our favor.

I won't bore anyone with the process of how we get to success, but at the same time no story starts at the climax. It is bound to take time to obtain our little bit of confirmation, but actionable steps can see to our prosperity.

Health

We start at the beginning:

Phase 1
- We utilize our Education department to expand awareness
- Offer services for pseudo-holistic health options
- Prospecting property for then-near-future expansion

At the end of the day, to ignite the spark needed for change, we require resources. So, we provide value.

Phase 2
- Acquiring property to begin Health initiatives
- Land for farming and agriculture
- Real Estate for education and exercise
- Expand previous businesses within a controlled network

We need the controlled network to align with the Education initiative for creating our own credibility. Once the network is formed, we can move to the next phase.

Phase 3
- R&D facilities
- Our own source of food secured
- Our own community culture would exhibit health & wellness
- Aim to create our own medical facilities

This is where our options begin to get complex. It would be smart to assess our trajectory after certain milestones are reached. Having our own anything introduces us to level of responsibility we may not be familiar with, Systemic Responsibility

Health

We don't stop at Phase 3, at this point it is a conceptual direction, even Phase 2 and parts of Phase 1 in practice are conceptual. Much of this depends on the response we receive from a world not yet exposed to Vonguul. Logically, it makes sense, but sometimes logic doesn't play as big a role as we think it should. Often, emotions and feelings take precedence, and who am I to say that is wrong. Maybe it is the way things are supposed to be.

In the meantime, we focus on the objective, and in time, we will show proof of concept. I am already aware that what I am presenting is an extremely viable solution to a problem involving the collective, but that doesn't mean others agree. Evidence will be the key to spurring the emotions, the feelings, the hormones that make us put action to the words we resonate with.

This is an emphasis on the needs of the collective. We can finally see a future where we feel safe and secure enough to turn off survival mode and thrive as a community. All we have to do is express, "Yes" to this movement. If our actions align with, our words aligning with our thoughts, we create using the holy trinity. Mind, body, and soul. Not to sound fantastical here, but conceptually that is what is happening.

Your thoughts come from your soul/spirit/essence/core, it is the result of what happened in that almost imperceptible part of you, and it happens in/with the mind. Your words come from your mind; it is the result of what happened in the mind, and it happens in/with the physical/body. Your actions come from your body; it is the culminated result of everything that happened before and permeates everyone's reality. Sometimes these things do not align with each other, and that results in an imbalance.

Technology

🚀 Exclusive Innovations

⚙ Cognitive Enhancement Platform

Utilizing Education to foster creativity and innovation by training to think outside of the box they're normally in.

🔬 Bio-Integration Systems

Wearable technology that can not only monitor and optimize health metrics in real-time, but can also serve auxiliary functions as well

☁ Secure Knowledge Network

Encrypted platform for sharing proprietary information among members, and a space solely for objective facts

🛡 Access Levels

Levels of access are meant to protect and encourage our members. Protect them from others attempting to use them and encourage them to excel in their own unique path with a provided array of resources to do with as they see fit.

Yes, there will be certain technological advancements or variants that are only available after reaching certain Ranks within the Levels.

No, not every tech mine in Vonguul will follow this format, but the innovations from our foundational Tech mine will be. I don't even know if other Vonguulian Tech mines will want to do something like this and we are always against imposing onto others without appropriate levels of consent.

Technology

I can understand the question of why does technology matter to creating an organized nation community. I would preface my answer with the understanding that technology doesn't just mean cellphones and computers. It also encompasses irrigation/plumbing, travel and even quality of life enhancements. Though we may be able to live without these things, eventually we would have to at the very least dabble in it. We want security and architecture is a form of technological advancement.

In pertinence to our organized nations success, we never planned to completely start over from scratch, and we also don't have any short-term plans for creating any townships. Long-term township plans or city building plans are more synonymous with Wonder building for us. Vonguul is meant to operate in a superimposed manner on top of what is already present. We don't require a physical territory in the universe to be called Vonguul, for us to operate within it. Instead, we aim to cooperate with established rules wherever possible to facilitate harmonious interactions with foreign entities.

In summary, technology and innovation will become our bargaining chip for trade and foreign relation agreements. What kind of technology could we possibly create that would make foreign nations enter into formal agreements with us? We have many ideas, some of which are even gaining popularity with the public. I personally don't feel comfortable talking about some of the ideas on a broadcasted platform, but I can mention some that aren't that major.

Hover Cars

More like a personal hover vehicle, flying cars aren't really that hard to make. It is the security that is a main concern.

We can fix the problem of navigation and operation issues but fixing the problem of human and mechanical consistency errors is another challenge altogether.

Ultimately this is one of the projects we would make public for obvious reasons, but it wouldn't be made capable of actual flight. It would just have unusual controls that people will quickly get used to.

Smart Glasses

Another piece of tech that is already in production outside of Vonguul would be smart glasses. Ranging from AR to VR.

Vonguulian Tech variants will mostly focus on Augmented Reality, at least initially. We would prefer your waking life to be optimized before introducing another near unconscious life experience.

Vonguulian variants would include navigation assistance, quick view analysis with prompt. To be coupled with a special Tech Glove.
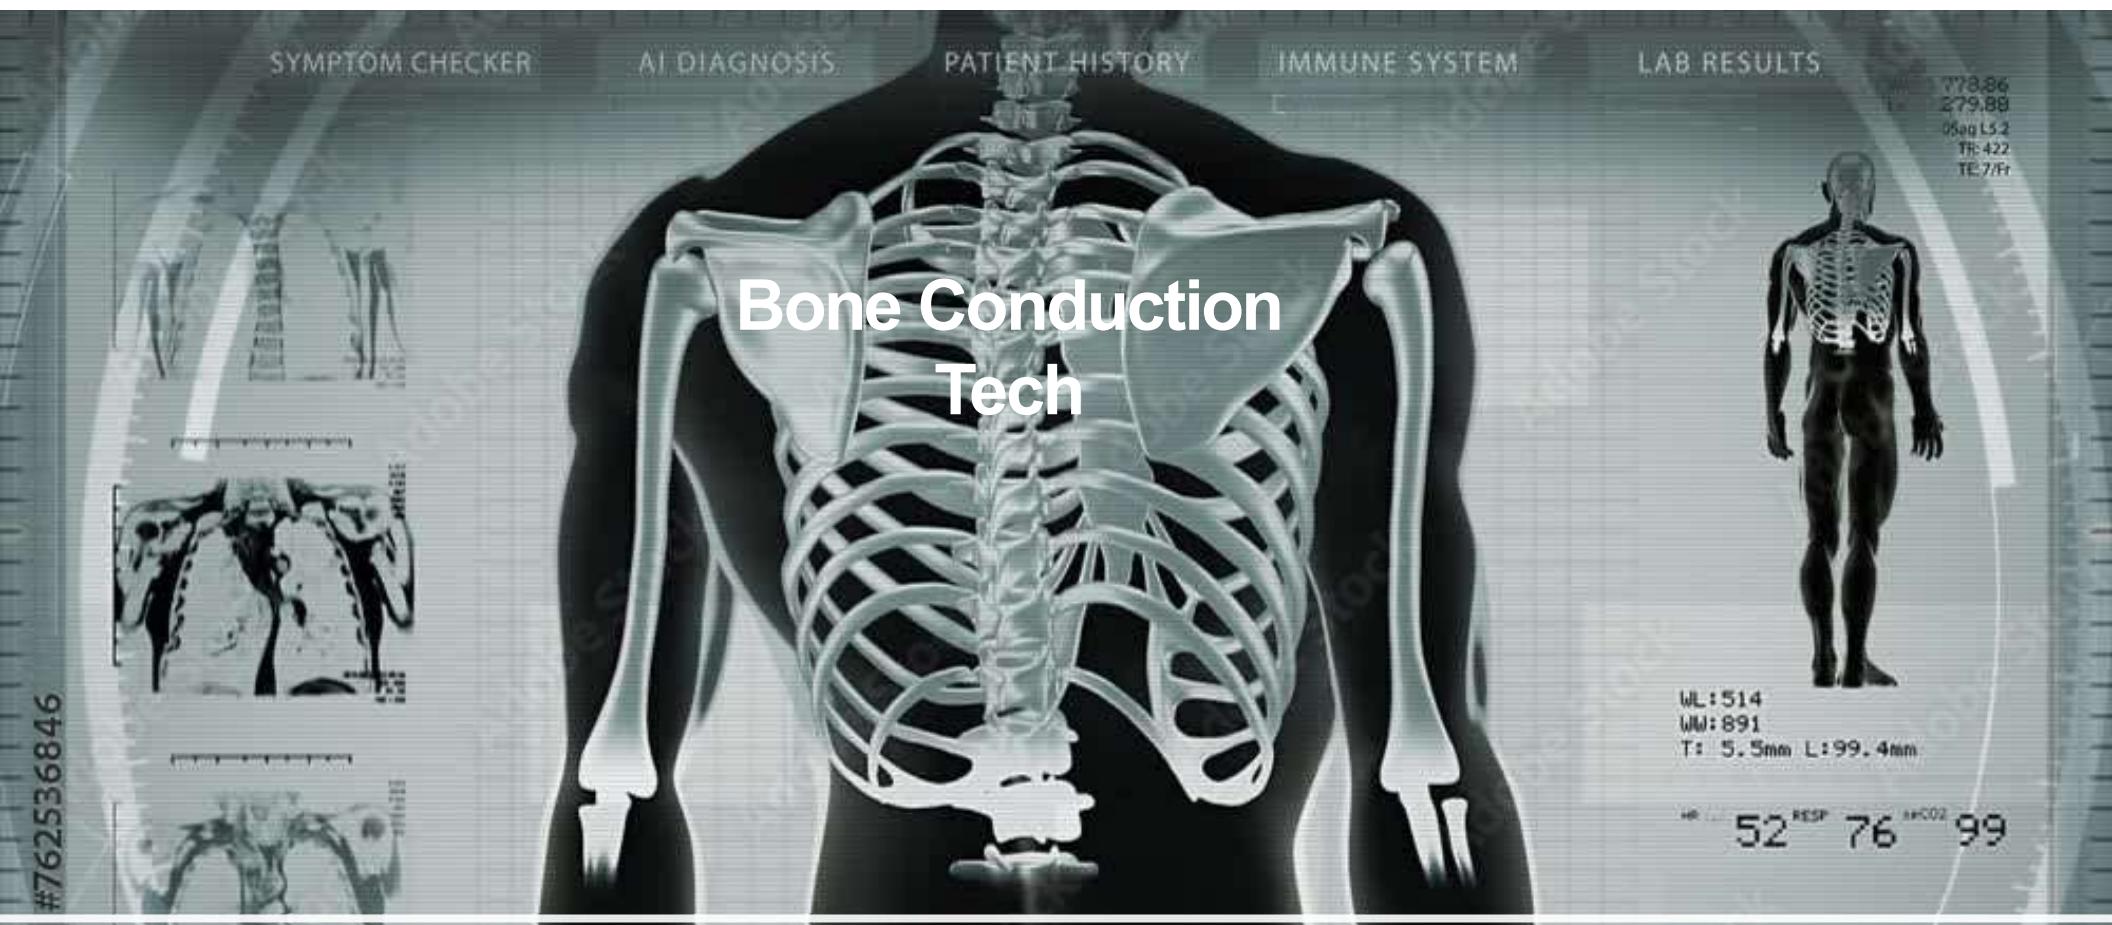

Tech Gloves

It most likely will not look like the image and is intended to only be worn on one hand with minimal to no obstruction.

Initial prototypes will use mini electromagnetic fields created by completing a circuit to simulate inputs.

This would be a supplemental product in a family of products. Will be used with Smart Glasses as a user input device.

Bone Conduction Tech

Bone conduction technology is another piece of tech that is currently used primarily for music/headphones, but we think there is a wider array of applications for this technology.

Technology

Those are just some of the ideas we have for technological advances, this does not include the platform and spaces that we plan to create to synergize with the tech we create. For example, we plan to create our own extranet designed to provide our members with the most accurate information in as secure a location as possible. Free of advertisements and fluff designed to distract you from your goals.

Not only an extranet, but we also plan to superimpose complete experiences over the physical world designed to augment reality into a visual representation that reflects our community. Imagine walking into a restaurant and seeing information that other Vonguulians have left about the place from quality to moments shared or looking at an assuming house in the physical world that transforms into a completely new and fresh experience in the augmented world.

We are supposed to be the future, the pioneers of ideas that others can't fathom the value of. It becomes a cultural recreation of the famous quote, "And those who were seen dancing were thought to be insane by those who could not hear the music."

Our tech will be designed to create experiences that align with what makes sense. Instead of going against the natural way of doing things we take an approach that considers the whole. We acknowledge the differences and the importance of each side while trying to create harmony from the opposing forces. We aim to move with confidence.

X-Factor

Maybe except for the tech section, I have been told that many of the concepts and ideas that Vonguul promotes have been attempted before, and the question becomes what is Vonguul doing different? What is the secret sauce that we bring to the table?

Respect to our predecessors, our X-Factor comes from the abundant history we have of their accolades, their victories and challenges faced. With that history we can learn from what worked, what didn't work, and how we can go further this time. From Malcolm X and Martin Luther King Jr to Huey P Newton and Bobby Seale. We are talking about civil rights movements, self defense initiatives, and community outreach programs. We are talking about equipping ourselves with the adequate amount of knowledge needed, to justify the necessary amount of action we will be required to apply.

We are not creating a new black panther party, we are bringing Vonguul to the forefront of activism for the betterment of our collective. Where others choose to protest and boycott, we have chosen to draw a clear distinction between us and them. Infiltration and betrayal have been key factors keeping us from our full potential, and we can't depend on what our physical eyes see to determine who our allies and opponents are.

We have had the blueprint for a while, and all we need is the right plan to navigate the obstacles we will face. I can't in good conscious, give all the details of what our X-Factor is, but what I can do is share a bit of history that, though we won't reenact, we have drawn inspiration from.

X-Factor – History – Black Panther Party

The party was founded in October 1966 in Oakland, California, by two young activists, Huey P. Newton and Bobby Seale. They met while they were students at Merritt College.

The Context: By the mid-1960s, the Civil Rights Movement had achieved major legislative victories like the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965. However, for many Black Americans in urban centers like Oakland, these legal changes did not translate into an improved daily reality. They still faced rampant poverty, substandard housing, unemployment, and, most critically, frequent and often violent harassment by the police.

Influence of Malcolm X: Newton and Seale were deeply influenced by the more radical teachings of Malcolm X, who had advocated for Black self-defense, self-determination, and Black nationalism, in contrast to the non-violent approach of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The Catalyst: Police Brutality

The immediate catalyst for the party's formation was the killing of an unarmed 16-year-old Black youth, Matthew Johnson, by Oakland police in July 1966. The shooting sparked days of protests and unrest in the city. For Newton and Seale, this event was the final proof that the system was not going to protect Black people and that they had to protect themselves.

The Founding and Initial Strategy

Newton and Seale drafted the Ten-Point Program, which outlined the party's goals and demands. It called for things like freedom, full employment, decent housing, education that taught Black history, and an immediate end to police brutality and the murder of Black people.

Their first and most famous action was the creation of armed citizen patrols to monitor the Oakland Police Department.

How it worked: Panther members, who were legally armed, would follow police cars at a safe distance. When the police stopped a Black civilian, the Panthers would emerge from their cars, stand at a legal distance with their shotguns (often slung over their shoulders), and observe the interaction to ensure no brutality occurred.

The Impact: This tactic was revolutionary. It was a direct, visible challenge to police authority and empowered the local Black community. The image of armed, disciplined Black Panthers in leather jackets and berets standing up to the police quickly gained national attention.

The Name

The name "Black Panther" was chosen because it was powerful and symbolized strength. It was inspired by the Lowndes County Freedom Organization (LCFO) in Alabama, an independent Black political party that had adopted a black panther as its mascot for the 1966 elections. Newton and Seale adopted the symbol and the name for their new organization.

Evolution Beyond Self-Defense

While initially focused on armed self-defense, the party quickly evolved. They recognized that true liberation also required meeting the community's immediate needs. This led to the creation of over 60 "Survival Programs," the most famous of which was the Free Breakfast for Children Program. Other programs included free health clinics, food drives, legal aid, and clothing drives.

In conclusion

They combined militant self-defense with community-based social programs, creating a model of Black empowerment that was both revolutionary and practical.

External Pressure: The FBI's COINTELPRO Program

The single most significant external factor for the Black Panther Party's fall, was the FBI's covert and illegal COINTELPRO (Counterintelligence Program). Directed by J. Edgar Hoover, the FBI declared the Black Panther Party "the greatest threat to the internal security of the country" and set out to "neutralize" it by any means necessary.

Their tactics were ruthless and effective:

Psychological Warfare: The FBI forged letters, spread false rumors in the media, and sent anonymous pamphlets to create paranoia and distrust within the party. They would forge letters between members to make it seem like others were planning to betray them.

Instigating Violence: A primary goal was to pit the Panthers against other Black nationalist groups. The FBI's most successful and deadly operation was instigating a feud between the Black Panthers and a rival group called the US Organization, leading to a series of deadly shootouts on both sides.

Illegal Surveillance and Harassment: The FBI wiretapped phones, bugged homes, and conducted illegal break-ins to gather intelligence. They worked with local police to arrest Panther members on flimsy charges, draining the party's resources with legal fees.

Direct Violence and Extrajudicial Killings: COINTELPRO's tactics culminated in direct police violence. The most infamous example is the 1969 Chicago police raid that resulted in the assassination of Fred Hampton, a charismatic and highly effective Black Panther Party leader, while he was asleep in his bed. The raid was guided by an FBI informant who had drugged Hampton's guard.

Internal Conflicts and Ideological Splits

While the government's assault was relentless, the party was also tearing itself apart from within.

Factionalism: A major ideological rift developed between the party's leadership in Oakland and the more militant, internationalist faction that had developed, largely around Eldridge Cleaver, who was in exile in Algeria.

- The Oakland Faction (led by Huey Newton): After his release from prison in 1970, Newton began to emphasize community programs ("Survival Programs") over armed confrontation.
- The "Revolutionary" Faction (led by Cleaver): Cleaver and his followers advocated for a more immediate, violent, urban guerrilla warfare strategy.
- This split led to purges, expulsions, and even violent clashes between former comrades, severely weakening the party's unity.

Leadership Issues and Centralization of Power: As the party faced increasing pressure, Huey Newton's leadership became more autocratic and erratic. He developed a deep paranoia, fueled by COINTELPRO's psychological warfare and his own drug use. He ordered purges of members he suspected of disloyalty, and some of his enforcers were accused of torture and murder within the party. This created a climate of fear and alienated many dedicated members.

Criminal Activity: While the party's official mission was community service, some members and chapters became involved in criminal activities like extortion and drug dealing to raise money. This not only violated the party's principles but also tarnished its public image and gave the government a pretext for its crackdown.

The Shift in Focus and Resource Drain

The constant state of siege forced the party to shift its focus away from its original goals.

Legal Battles: Defending members in court consumed enormous amounts of time and money. Resources that once went to the Free Breakfast for Children Program and free health clinics were diverted to legal fees.

Military Confrontations: Repeated shootouts with police led to the deaths and arrests of key members, depleting the party's ranks and leadership. The focus shifted from building community to simple survival.

The Final Years and Dissolution

By the mid-1970s, the party was a shadow of its former self.

Huey Newton's Decline: In 1974, facing murder charges, Newton fled to Cuba. He returned in 1977, but his problems with drug addiction and internal power struggles intensified.

Elaine Brown's Leadership: In Newton's absence, Elaine Brown chaired the party. She focused on electoral politics and community programs but later left the party, disillusioned by the pervasive sexism and violence she encountered, particularly from Newton.

Official Dissolution: The party's membership had dwindled, and its community programs had largely collapsed. In 1982, the Black Panther Party was officially dissolved.

X-Factor – History – Black Panther Party – The Fall

In conclusion, the Black Panther Party fell because the government's illegal and violent campaign of repression successfully exploited and amplified the party's own internal weaknesses in addition to creating new problems for their organization. The combination of external sabotage and internal decay proved too much for the organization to overcome, bringing a tragic end to one of the most complex and influential movements of the 20th century.

History will be our best friend until we allow it to hold us back from our future. Failure can feel like the end of the world, but it is also the beginning of a new experience. The quicker we can process where we are in our plan, the quicker we can get to our next milestone.

Let's look at more history that we can learn from. It would be noteworthy to understand, we are not picky about the details and knowledge is knowledge. Any and everything that has been said or done, can and will be used for our benefit, as if it were prepared to defend itself in a court of law. I should express that the sentiment is to always aim for peace, when peace is difficult to maintain we still aim for peace, when peace can not be sustained, we choose life.

The message there is bound to be lost in translation, but it is my desire that everyone receives clarity from my choice of words. Let's continue, as it may be clarified with more details.

X-Factor – History – Martin Luther King Jr.

Core Philosophy: Nonviolent Civil Disobedience

- King was deeply influenced by his Christian faith and the teachings of Mahatma Gandhi.
- He believed that nonviolence was not a sign of weakness but the most powerful weapon for an oppressed people.
- The goal was to use love, passive resistance, and peaceful protest (marches, boycotts, sit-ins) to create a "constructive nonviolent tension" that would force society to confront its own injustice and appeal to the moral conscience of white America.

Ultimate Goal: Integration and the "Beloved Community"

- King envisioned a fully integrated, multiracial American society where people were judged by the "content of their character, not the color of their skin."
- His dream was the "Beloved Community," a society based on justice, equal opportunity, and love of one's fellow human beings. He fought to dismantle segregation and bring Black and white people together.

Key Organizations & Events:

- Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC): The organization he co-founded and led.
- Montgomery Bus Boycott (1955-1956): His first major leadership role.
- March on Washington (1963): Where he delivered his iconic "I Have a Dream" speech.
- Nobel Peace Prize (1964): Awarded for his nonviolent struggle against racial segregation.

X-Factor – History – Malcolm X

Core Philosophy: Black Nationalism and Self-Defense "By Any Means Necessary"

- As the national spokesman for the Nation of Islam (NOI) for most of his public career, Malcolm advocated for Black political, economic, and social independence.

- He was deeply critical of King's nonviolent approach, arguing that Black people had the right and responsibility to defend themselves "by any means necessary" against violent white aggression. He called it "intelligence" to protect oneself.

- He preached Black pride, self-reliance, and was unafraid to identify the root of America's racial problem as systemic and institutional.

Ultimate Goal: Separation and Independence (Early Years)

- Initially, Malcolm and the NOI did not seek integration. They believed it was impossible and undesirable. Instead, they advocated for a separate Black nation or state in America.

- He viewed white people as a collective enemy and was highly skeptical of their ability to ever grant true freedom and equality to Black people.

Key Organizations & Events:

- Nation of Islam (NOI): Where he rose to prominence.
- "The Ballot or the Bullet" Speech (1964): A powerful speech arguing for Black political empowerment and self-defense.
- Autobiography of Malcolm X: A seminal book that detailed his life and evolving philosophy.

X-Factor – History – Malcolm X

Core Philosophy: Black Nationalism and Self-Defense "By Any Means Necessary"

- As the national spokesman for the Nation of Islam (NOI) for most of his public career, Malcolm advocated for Black political, economic, and social independence.
- He was deeply critical of King's nonviolent approach, arguing that Black people had the right and responsibility to defend themselves "by any means necessary" against violent white aggression. He called it "intelligence" to protect oneself.
- He preached Black pride, self-reliance, and was unafraid to identify the root of America's racial problem as systemic and institutional.

Ultimate Goal: Separation and Independence (Early Years)

- Initially, Malcolm and the NOI did not seek integration. They believed it was impossible and undesirable. Instead, they advocated for a separate Black nation or state in America.
- He viewed white people as a collective enemy and was highly skeptical of their ability to ever grant true freedom and equality to Black people.

Key Organizations & Events:

- Nation of Islam (NOI): Where he rose to prominence.
- "The Ballot or the Bullet" Speech (1964): A powerful speech arguing for Black political empowerment and self-defense.
- Autobiography of Malcolm X: A seminal book that detailed his life and evolving philosophy.

X-Factor – History – MLK Jr vs Malcolm X

Feature	Martin Luther King Jr.	Malcolm X
Philosophy	Nonviolent Civil Disobedience	Self-Defense "By Any Means Necessary"
Goal	Integration into a multiracial society	Black Nationalism, Separation (initially)
View of Whites	Saw potential for allies and change	Viewed as the historical oppressor
Religious Influence	Protestant Christianity	Nation of Islam (later Sunni Islam)
Primary Base	The Black church and the rural South	Urban youth and Northern ghettos

Malcolm X's Transformation:

After leaving the Nation of Islam in 1964, Malcolm made the Hajj pilgrimage to Mecca. There, he saw Muslims of all colors—white, Black, brown—praying and living together as equals. This experience shattered his belief that all white people were inherently evil. He returned to America with a new, more inclusive outlook. He began to speak of international human rights and expressed a willingness to work with other civil rights leaders, including Dr. King. He was no longer strictly a separatist but a revolutionary humanist.

Martin Luther King Jr.'s Radicalization:

In his final years, King also became more radical. He saw that passing laws wasn't enough. He began to connect racism with economic inequality and launched the Poor People's Campaign, a multiracial coalition to fight poverty. He also became one of the most prominent opponents of the Vietnam War, understanding that militarism abroad was linked to violence and poverty at home. He was moving from a focus on civil rights to a broader critique of the entire American system.

What is The Venus Project?

The Venus Project is an organization founded by Jacque Fresco (1916-2017), a self-taught industrial designer, social engineer, and futurist. It operates as a research and educational center located in Venus, Florida.

At its core, The Venus Project advocates for a Resource-Based Economy (RBE). This is the central pillar of its philosophy.

The Core Concept: A Resource-Based Economy (RBE)

An RBE is a system where all goods and services are available to everyone without the use of money, credit, barter, or any form of debt or servitude. Instead of being driven by profit, the economy is managed by the automated monitoring of the planet's resources.

Key features of an RBE include:

•No Money or Property: Money, credit, and the concept of private property (as we know it) are eliminated. Instead, the world's resources are declared the common heritage of all people.

•Automation and Cybernation: The majority of labor, including mundane and dangerous jobs, is automated. This frees humanity from repetitive toil and allows for a higher standard of living for everyone.

•Scientific Management of Resources: A centralized, AI-driven system would survey the planet's resources (minerals, water, energy, etc.) and manage their use in the most sustainable and efficient way possible. Decisions are not made by politicians or corporations, but by scientific data and the carrying capacity of the Earth.

•Focus on Needs, Not Wants: The system's primary goal is to meet the needs of every human being—clean air, water, food, housing, healthcare, and education—while preserving the environment.

What Would a Venus Project Society Look Like?
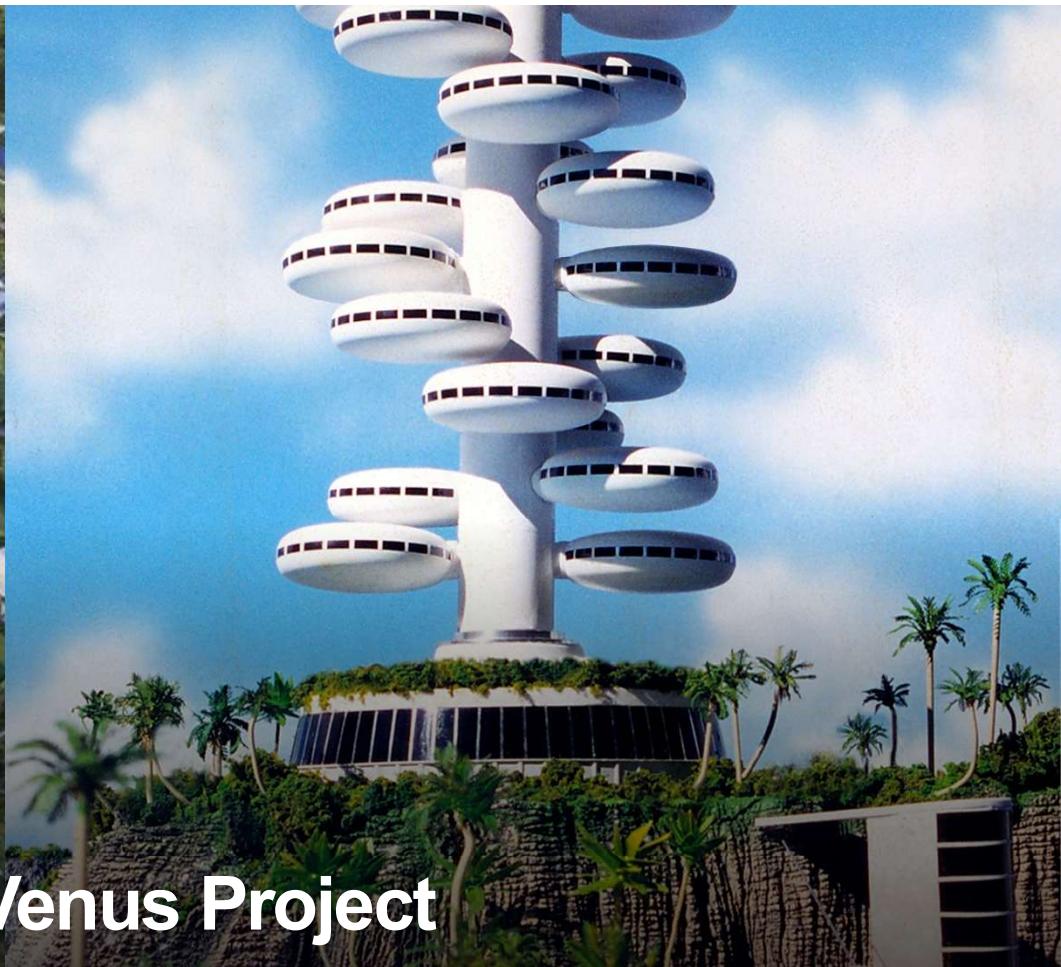

Fresco and his team spent decades designing detailed models and blueprints of what this future would look like.

•Circular Cities: The vision involves building entirely new, self-sufficient cities designed in a circular pattern. This layout minimizes waste and transportation needs. The cities would be divided into different zones:

- Central Dome: The core for social, cultural, and educational activities.
- Agricultural Belt: A section for hydroponic and aeroponic food production.
- Residential Zone: Housing integrated with parks and natural landscapes.
- Energy Belt: Using clean, renewable sources like solar, wind, and geothermal power.

•Transportation: Fully automated, electric vehicles and high-speed maglev trains would provide seamless, integrated public transportation, eliminating the need for private cars.

•Daily Life: With automation handling production and resource management, people would be free to pursue their interests—science, art, education, exploration, and social relationships. The emphasis would shift from "jobs" and "careers" to lifelong learning and contribution.

X-Factor – History – The Venus Project

X-Factor – History – Black Wallstreet

In the early 20th century, Tulsa's Greenwood District was a thriving, self-sufficient African American community. Following the oil boom in Oklahoma, the city was booming, and segregation laws forced Black residents to create their own economic ecosystem. This segregation, born of oppression, ironically became the foundation for Black prosperity.

What made it so successful?

•Self-Reliance: The community had its own everything. Black dollars were spent at Black-owned businesses and circulated within the community dozens of times before leaving.

•Entrepreneurial Spirit: The district was home to over 300 Black-owned businesses, including:

- Financial Institutions: Two Black-owned banks, including the nation's largest, the Dollar Savings Bank, which provided loans to Black entrepreneurs who couldn't get them from white institutions.

- Retail: Grocery stores, clothing shops, jewelry stores, and funeral homes.

- Services: Law offices, doctor's offices, a modern hospital, and a library.

- Media: Two newspapers, including the Tulsa Star, which advocated for Black political and social rights.

- Entertainment: Hotels, theaters, and a famous jazz scene that attracted top artists of the era.

•Education and Wealth: The community had a high rate of Black homeownership and a strong school system. It was a place of immense Black pride, intellectual achievement, and wealth. The famous educator Booker T. Washington visited and reportedly called it the "Negro Wall Street of America," a name that stuck.

Greenwood was a testament to what was possible in a deeply segregated nation. It was a safe, prosperous, and vibrant community where Black families could build a life of dignity and success.

The Massacre: 31 Hours of Terror

On May 31 and June 1, 1921, the entire community was decimated in one of the worst acts of racial violence in American history.

The Catalyst:

The violence was sparked by a rumor. A young Black man named Dick Rowland tripped and fell in an elevator, accidentally brushing against the white elevator operator, Sarah Page. A clerk who witnessed the fall misconstrued the event as an assault. The next day, the Tulsa Tribune ran a sensational, inflammatory front-page story titled "Nab Negro for Attacking Girl in an Elevator."

The Escalation:

1. Confrontation at the Courthouse: An angry white mob gathered outside the courthouse, intent on lynching Rowland. Hearing of the threat, a group of Black men from Greenwood, many of whom were World War I veterans, went to the courthouse armed and offered to help the sheriff protect Rowland. Their offer was refused, but their presence infuriated the white mob.

2. The Shot Heard 'Round the Courthouse: In the chaos that evening, a white man tried to disarm a Black veteran. A shot was fired, and the mob descended on the outnumbered Black men, chasing them back toward Greenwood.

3. The Invasion: The white mob, now numbering in the thousands and deputized by city officials, swarmed into the Greenwood District. They were given weapons and ammunition. They looted homes and businesses, setting them on fire one by one.

4. Aerial Attack: In a horrifying and unprecedented act, private planes were used to drop turpentine bombs and firebombs from the sky, making the Tulsa Race Massacre the first and only time American citizens have been aerially bombed on U.S. soil by their fellow citizens.

5. Systematic Murder: People were shot in their homes, in the streets, and as they tried to flee. The violence was not random; it was a coordinated, systematic destruction of an entire community.

X-Factor – History – Black Wallstreet – The Aftermath

The Cover-Up

• The Cost: The official death toll at the time was 36 (10 white and 26 Black). Modern historians estimate the true number is between 100 and 300 people, with the vast majority of victims being Black.

• Economic Devastation: Over 35 square blocks were destroyed. More than 1,250 homes were burned, leaving nearly 9,000 people homeless. Over 200 businesses were destroyed, and the economic loss would be worth over $30 million today (over $400 million adjusted for inflation).

• The Cover-Up: In the days that followed, no white person was ever prosecuted for the violence. Instead, city officials blamed the Black community. For decades, the massacre was systematically erased from history books and public conversation. Survivors were terrorized into silence.

The Legacy

In 1997, the Tulsa Race Riot Commission was formed to investigate the massacre. Their final report confirmed the city's complicity and recommended reparations for survivors and their descendants.

• Modern Efforts:

- Greenwood Rising: A state-of-the-art history center was built in 2021 on the centennial of the massacre to tell the story of Greenwood's rise, fall, and resilience.

- Search for Graves: Archaeological investigations are ongoing to find the unmarked mass graves where victims were buried.

- Justice Movement: The fight for legal justice and reparations for the last three known survivors continues to this day.

Gaddafi was born in 1942 near Sirte, Libya, to a Bedouin family. He was a fervent Arab nationalist and admired Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser. While a young army officer, he formed the Free Officers Movement, a secret group of revolutionaries dedicated to overthrowing the pro-Western monarchy of King Idris I.

On September 1, 1969, Gaddafi and his men launched a nearly bloodless coup while the king was abroad for medical treatment. He was just 27 years old. The coup was popular, as many Libyans felt the monarchy had benefited from the nation's oil wealth while leaving the general population poor.

The "Jamahiriya" and The Green Book

Gaddafi rejected traditional systems of democracy and monarchy. Instead, he created his own unique political system outlined in his three-volume collection, The Green Book.

• Jamahiriya: In 1977, he declared Libya a "Jamahiriya," which translates to "state of the masses." In theory, this was a direct democracy governed by local people's councils. It was an autocracy where all power was concentrated in Gaddafi's hands. He held no official title, styling himself as a "Brotherly Leader and Guide of the Revolution."

• The Green Book: This book was his political manifesto, critiquing Western democracy and communism while proposing his "Third Universal Theory." It was mandatory reading in Libyan schools and was the basis for the country's laws, though its ideas were often bizarre and impractical.

X-Factor – History – Gaddafi

Gaddafi's 42-year rule was a paradox of significant social development and brutal repression.

The "Positive" Side (as promoted by his regime):

• Social Welfare: Using Libya's vast oil wealth, Gaddafi invested heavily in social programs. He introduced free education and free healthcare, dramatically raising literacy rates and life expectancy.

• Infrastructure: He initiated massive infrastructure projects, the most famous of which is the Great Man-Made River Project, an enormous network of pipes that pumps fossil water from aquifers deep in the desert to coastal cities.

• Women's Rights: Compared to many other Arab nations, Gaddafi promoted women's rights. Women were encouraged to pursue education and join the workforce. He famously employed an all-female contingent of elite bodyguards.

• Anti-Imperialism: He was a staunch opponent of Western influence and colonialism, which earned him respect in some parts of the developing world.

X-Factor – History – Gaddafi

The Dark Side (The Dictatorship):

• Brutal Repression: There was no political freedom or freedom of speech. Dissent was crushed mercilessly. Political opponents were tortured, imprisoned, or killed. Public executions were common.

• Cult of Personality: Gaddafi built an immense cult of personality around himself. His portrait was everywhere, and his speeches were broadcast for hours on state television.

• State-Sponsored Terrorism: For years, Libya was designated a state sponsor of terrorism. The most notorious example was the 1988 Lockerbie bombing, where a Pan Am flight was blown up over Scotland, killing 270 people. A Libyan intelligence agent was eventually convicted.

• Corruption and Nepotism: While the country had oil wealth, it was controlled by Gaddafi, his family, and his inner circle, leading to widespread corruption.

A Pariah to a Partner and Back
Gaddafi's relationship with the world was volatile.

Pariah State (1980s-1990s): After the Lockerbie bombing and other terrorist acts, Libya faced international sanctions and isolation. In 1986, the U.S. bombed Tripoli and Benghazi to kill Gaddafi, which failed.

Rehabilitation (2000s): In a dramatic turnaround, Gaddafi sought to end his isolation. He accepted responsibility for Lockerbie, dismantled his weapons of mass destruction programs, and shared intelligence with the West on terrorist groups. Leaders like Tony Blair, Silvio Berlusconi, and Condoleezza Rice visited Libya, and the country was welcomed back into the international community.

This is very important to take notice of, and to also remember that the victors write the history books, a fundamental flaw in the current approach to history. Even if you surrender, you will still be considered a threat to be removed.

X-Factor – History – Gaddafi – The Fall

In February 2011, inspired by the Arab Spring uprisings in Tunisia and Egypt, protests broke out in Libya. Gaddafi's response was swift and brutal, vowing to hunt down the protesters "door to door" and "show no mercy."

This triggered a full-blown civil war. The United Nations authorized a no-fly zone to protect civilians, which was enforced by a NATO-led coalition. The intervention quickly expanded to active air support for the rebel forces.

After months of fierce fighting, rebel forces captured the capital, Tripoli, in August 2011. On October 20, 2011, Gaddafi was captured, brutally beaten, and killed by rebels in his hometown of Sirte. His final moments were filmed on a cell phone and broadcast globally.

Legacy and the Aftermath

Gaddafi left behind a deeply divided country with no functioning political institutions. His removal created a power vacuum that Libya has never recovered from. The country has been in a state of near-constant civil war, plagued by rival governments, Islamist militias, and human trafficking.

His legacy is intensely debated:
- To his supporters, he was a revolutionary hero who stood up to the West and lifted Libya out of poverty.
- To his detractors, he was a cruel, eccentric tyrant who murdered his own people and ruled through fear.

X-Factor – History – Summary

Vonguul's X-Factor isn't intended to be surmised as just history. For those who know me and how I operate, know that I am especially skilled at reverse engineering information. With such a large database of different ideas, experiences, and outcomes, creating a system that works for us isn't a fantasy story. This is not a dream, this is not a myth, we may not be able to present ourselves to our full potential today, but with consistent focused effort towards an effective goal we can exceed the expectations of our potential.

No more begging, no more scamming, no more losing a winnable battle, no more thinking that big bro loves you, no more hiding the fact that the world we live in is ugly, no more expecting that the government can be trusted.

God said this is disgusting and somebody has to clean it up.

Actionable Next Steps

Begin your journey with our organization through these strategic pathways to exponential growth

Purchase Services

1. Explore our service catalog

2. Select the options that align with your goals

3. Complete any necessary forms

4. Schedule your personalized growth consultation (If needed)

Join Community

1. Attend an introductory session to experience our approach

2. Connect with us via Patreon or Discord for updates

3. Participate in projects that showcase value

4. Contribute to our commitment with a donation